

BCM One works with a lot of financial services organizations, and we understand what it takes to deliver consistently high-quality and profitable services.

We know what matters to financial services.

Relationships matter

A CTO of various financial companies knows with confidence he can make an immediate positive impact on every new company he goes to by bringing in BCM One to do a technology audit to get full visibility into the environment. It enables him to be effective faster by providing best practices, newer technology, redundancy, and a single point of contact right out of the gate. Read case study.

Efficiency matters

A financial services company wanted to migrate its PRI to alleviate issues it was experiencing and upgrade to SIP trunking. BCM One provides a national MPLS network, making frequent moves and changes due to acquisitions, new locations, office mergers, etc. much easier for the company. Their voice lines are critical, but with BCM One, they know that's taken care of, which lets them focus on all the other aspects of the change. Read case study.

Security matters

A financial services company needed to move everything to the cloud, including the company's voice system—and they needed the solution to be highly secure and highly redundant to get as close to 100% uptime as possible. BCM One designed a plan to implement SIP trunking over MPLS in a replicated fashion, centralized in their data center for security. Read case study.

Visibility matters

A national debt settlement company had no idea what carrier services it had contracted for and had simply stopped paying their carrier bills. At the same time, they were planning to move their headquarters to a new office building. BCM One created a parallel strategy to get a handle on technology commitments and spend, build a future-state design based on business requirements, and manage the tight deadlines of the office move. Read case study.
